THE DECLARATION OF RUNNERS

AT the moment, there is no more debated subject in racing than that of the over-the-counter runner...

Those who are fortunate enough to be able to attend the racecourse in person are apt to look down upon the off-the-course followers of racing as people who contribute nothing to the purse...

This is hardly the reasonable attitude, since many of these only come within the category mentioned because they have not the time, or the money, to go racing with the others...

It is argued that the off-the-counter runner can make his selection from the list of winners—without in any case the chances of a runner who has to race the race to print them. A sporting person, apart from his own horse, is not concerned with the result of any race...
